A Woman's Fight: Women's International League for Peace and Freedom

The California History Center at De Anza College in Cupertino is excited to host, in winter quarter 2017, a Peninsula community-based exhibit highlighting the 100+-year history of The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom (WILPF) and its Palo Alto Chapter, with a special focus on the organization's development and work at the local level. Featured also are WILPF's "Raging Grannies," familiar to many for their public demonstrations, peace songs and "fun antics" promoting peaceful resolution of conflict and social justice as prevention against war and other forms of violence.
